HADRIAN'S WALL

It was seventy miles long, extending almost from sea to sea. It consisted of three distinct parts, (1) a stone wall and ditch, on the north; (2) a double earthen rampart and ditch, about 120 yards to the south; and (3) between wall and rampart, a series of fourteen fortified camps connected by a road. The northern wall was 8 feet broad and 20 feet high, with turreted gates at mile intervals, and with numerous large towers for guard-stations.
